The screenshot shows a web page with a navigation menu at the top: 'home', 'log archive', 'articles', 'learn css', 'portfolio'. There are links for 'about', 'subscribe', and 'contact' in the top right, along with a search box containing the word 'find'. A large blue logo with the letters 'KF' is on the left. The main content area features the title 'Latest Entry' in a large, light blue font, followed by the article title 'London, baby!' and the author 'By Faruk Ates on Jun 9, 2005, 01:16 · 1 comment'. The article text discusses the author's experience at the @media 2005 event in Rotterdam. On the right side, there is a sidebar with sections: 'Additional data' (with a 'You are here:' breadcrumb), a 'Log in' form with fields for 'Login name' and 'Password', and a 'Log in' button. Below that are sections for 'Events' (listing '@Media 2005'), 'Recent Reads' (listing various articles like 'Why HTML does not matter' and 'That little "XHTML or HTML?" debate'), and 'Easy Reader'.

The time has finally come: @media 2005! As I write this, I'm sitting in Rotterdam Airport, waiting for my plane to allow boarding. I've got a lovely view of the airport area - or at least, as lovely as such a thing can be - and I'm excited! A brief report on pre-@media events.

Now, who wouldn't be excited when they're going on their first ever business trip, about to meet several of the biggest names in their field of expertise and, last but not least, on their way to two days of web standards, accessibility and bloggers, bloggers and more bloggers? My point exactly.

Before going into any details, I must say I'm saddened that some people will be absent. John Oxtan and Robert Nyman, you will both be missed at this event. John had to decide between saving his business and @media, and Robert only got the go-ahead from his boss when @media was already sold out. Sometimes life's just not fair, eh?

But the absence of some should not spoil the fun of others, or something like that. There will be sessions by none other than Douglas Bowman and Molly E. Holzschlag

Arrived in London for @media

This morning around 11 my boyfriend and I departed for @media London. We took the train from Deinde to Brussels, eat some sandwich and then checked in to take the Eurostar from Brussels to London Waterloo. This was my actually my first time I travelled with the Eurostar. Apart from the very poor Dutch by the train manager (it was advisable to pay attention to the French version instead, it was that bad) the trip went smooth. And around 2.30 p.m. local time we arrived, took a cab to the hotel and checked in. Everything was perfectly timed to collect our badges (scheduled between 3 and 4 p.m.).

Then it was time to do a bit of sight seeing. We walked towards the center of London and explored a bit and enjoyed the beautiful weather. At this time my feet and legs feel like they did the necessary exercise. So not to worry about the California burger I ate at dinner :-). We had a serious walk in the park nearby and took a few pictures along the road ... not sure but I think it was st.-James park. Back to the hotel, first thing I did is to get a wireless access code to get on the WiFi. At the reception desk I got acquainted with Roger Johansson, you know from 456 Berea Street. A few minutes later Faruk arrived and before I realized it 30 minutes passed by. And talking about an exercise, the elevator seem to broke... our room is at the sixth floor. I think I will sleep as a rose... dreaming what tomorrow will bring :-)

Peter-Paul Koch

The screenshot shows the homepage of QuirksMode.org. The header features the site logo "[quirksmode]" and the motto "Hell is other browsers - Sartre". Navigation links include Home, Contact, Sitemap, Links, and a search for junior web developers. A sidebar lists various topics: JAVASCRIPT, W3C DOM, CSS, VIEWPORT, BROWSERS, ABOUT, FREELANCE, and ODDS AND ENDS. The main content area includes a "QuirksMode" title, a "Contents" button, and a "PPK" signature. A paragraph describes the site as a personal and professional resource for Peter-Paul Koch, a freelance web developer in Amsterdam. It mentions over 150 pages of CSS and JavaScript tips and tricks, and notes that the site is free of charge and largely free of copyrights. A "Popular destinations" box lists links to W3C DOM Compatibility Tables, What is Quirks Mode?, and Frequently Asked Questions. Below this, a section for "QuirksBlog" features a post titled "Gone to London; site closed" dated 8 June 2005. The post explains that the author is attending the @media 2005 conference in London and that the site will be closed during that time. A "Latest bug reports" box lists three items: "Text-indent value renders checkboxes unclickable" (Safari), "Disappearing dropdown in lists" (Explorer Mac, Mozilla), and "Border around iframe" (Explorer Windows).

London calling

I'm off to London for a few days to attend the @media 2005 conference. I'm really looking forward to seeing, listening to, and meeting some of the people who have taught me much of what I know. I'll try not to ask for autographs, I promise.

And I'm nervous as hell. Not about flying. Not so much about meeting a lot of people I don't know (though it almost feels like I do know some of them). It's mostly about having to speak English to native English speakers.

Safari Wishlist

Safari is an excellent web browser and my current favourite. However there's always room for improvement, and I thought I'd mention some areas where I think Safari needs a bit of attention. Some are missing features, others are bugs.

After posting my Wishlist for IE7 I think it's only fair to also talk about the shortcomings of a really good browser. Maybe it will help Apple keep Safari at the very top of the browser pack?

WHAT'S UP

Blogger's Day Flowers? Chocolates? Brunch? Those are all acceptable ways of honoring mom but we thought we'd do something different. An all-new release of Blogger on Mother's day. It's not a traditional gift, but we made it ourselves so we thought that might count for something. Please bear with us this Sunday at 3PM PST for a couple hours of scheduled downtime while we work on launching all the additional features and a whole new look for Blogger.

Publish your thoughts

A blog is a web page made up of usually short, frequently updated posts that are arranged chronologically—like a what's new page or a journal. The content and purposes of blogs varies greatly—from links and commentary about other web sites, to news about a company/person/idea, to diaries, photos, poetry, mini-essays, project updates, even fiction.

Blog posts are like instant messages to the web.

Many blogs are personal, "what's on my mind" type musings. Others are collaborative efforts based on a specific topic or area of mutual interest. Some blogs are for play. Some are for work. Some are both.
